Virginia Polya Eliminated In The Times' Complete Sport Page

By LOUIS A. DOUGHER.

Georgetown's varsity eleven has yet to taste defeat. The Blue and Gray, rallying after a week of mediocre playing, completely outclassed the powerful Virginia Polytechnic Institute team. The final score was 88 to 7, which just about indicates the difference between the two

Virginia came to the Hilltop confident of its strength. It pointed to the marvelous running of Godsey, the superior all-around work of Henry Crisp, and the size and strength of its forwards. And when the shades of evening fell, it was "Wamba" McQuade, the sturdy Georgetown captain, who had won most of the laurels. The Hilltop leader was in everything all afternoon, topping off his fine work with a sixty-threeyard gallop behind perfect interference for a touchdown.

Man for man Virginia was outplayed. Its forwards were usually of little use against the fierce charging of the Hilltoppers. The backs, long-legged chaps, got away slowly and Harry Sullivan and Bill Kenyon raised havoc among them. Godsey and Crisp were thoroughly covered and failed utterly to startle the big crowd.

Thanks to a truly heroic series of straight line plunges in the secon quarter, in which Virginia carried th ball from its own 34-yard line within a foot or so of the Hilltopper goal line, the visitors had an edge first downs. Tech made fifteen twelve for Georgetown. Tech's elg punts averaged forty yards, whi Georgetown's five boots averaged yards. And yet, despite these figure there was a wide margin of abili noted between the two elevens.
